HISTORY

Vigneron Michael Cooper made wine in Aragon before he and wife Rosario decided to build their own winery in Campo de Borja. Vinos del Viento's namesake comes from the strong winds that carve through the Ebro River Valley -reaching 50km per hour- known as the Cierzo wind.

Cooper is revered as a pioneer in the region, making wines from abandoned single vineyards whose vines weren't producing sufficient fruit for bulk farmers. Nurturing these vines back to health with biodynamic practices has revealed single-vineyard expressions that continue to pique neighboring farmers interests and cultivate both respect and praise in international reviewers press.

With a philosophy of combining tradition and innovation, Cooper has a prevailing mission statement: "[these wines are] unique treasures to preserve and share with the world."

VINIFICATION and MATURATION

Hand-harvested using small baskets and whole-bunch lightly pressed into concrete. Only the 'Saignee' or free-run juice is taken after a short time on the skins.

VINEYARD

Sourced from numerous Garnacha vineyard sites throughout Campo de Borja, all planted to soils rich in chalk.

TASTING NOTES

Delicate aromas of red berries, cherries and strawberries . On the palate it is dry and crisp with juicy flavors of raspberry and citrus.

FOOD PAIRING

As an apéritif, an array of summer salads, falafel and feta, grilled meats and charcuterie.
